AudioCraft

Described as a soundtrack to your daily routine, AudioCraft offers its melodic instrumentals which often resonate among heavy beats.

AudioCraft's sole member is noted technical author Bob Kelly, who

- ▶ has written books, articles and papers on topics such as desktop administration and scripting.

Founded in 1998, AudioCraft saw a handful of independent releases (including "The Trance Experimental") before its first official release, "Deployment" in 2006. In 2007, a video was released as a new single entitled "Treo Death" in which a Palm Treo smart phone is destroyed by fireworks and hammers (upsetting many fans of the device on YouTube).

The music of AudioCraft is most often compared to that of Chemical Brothers, Prodigy, and Daft Punk. Check out "I.C. Fridge" and "D.C. Metro".

About Bob Kelly

Bob is also founder of the popular AppDeploy.com community website and was awarded Most Valuable Professional (MVP) by Microsoft in 2008. His most recent book is entitled "Deploying and Administering Windows Vista Bible" (Wiley). For more on Bob Kelly, visit <http://www.bkelly.com>.
